STREET LIGHTING WILL CONTINUE

Local Company will not Take Advantage of Position in which it Holds the Borough but will Furnish Current so Long as Desired.

Gettysburg's five year contract with the Gettysburg Lighting Company for the illumination of the town streets expires to-night and it is within the power of that company to leave the place in darkness. T. P. Turner, manager of the company, states, however, that it is not their intention to play that trick upon the borough and that they will continue as in the past to furnish current so long as the council desires it.

With the town council at the present time exerting itself to provide ways and means for the erection of a municipal plant which would deprive the lighting company of about $3000 a year revenue, it was feared by many citizens that the company would not feel so kindly disposed and that, with the power within its grasp of suddenly plunging the streets in darkness, it might use that means to vent its indignation.

The town council, realizing that it would be several months before a municipal plant could be gotten into working condition here, decided at their regular August meeting Tuesday night to ask the Gettysburg Light Company to continue to furnish light at the present rate until further notice, subject to discontinuance upon thirty days' notice. Mr. Turner, when asked by a representative of this paper, what the company intended to do said,

"Of course, we will light the streets, just so long as the town wants us to. Even if we knew that in two months the business would be taken from us through the erection of a borough plant, we would continue to furnish current until that time, for we have enough regard for the rights of the citizens generally not to cause the inconvenience which would result from our withdrawing current for street lighting."

In the present agitation for and against a municipal plant the representatives of the Light Company have had little if anything to say, and it is believed that they are trusting in a disposition of the case by the Public Service Commission of the State which will be favorable to their interests.

At any event it is gratifying to know that the management is so fair minded that he will not allow a condition which would work to the detriment of both the town and his company.

WAR NEWS

Unconfirmed war news received in dispatches to-day included the following.

The Italians seized two German liners when they were attempting to take aboard coal for German warships.

It is unofficially reported that the Belgians lost 9000 including a large number of officers in the battle at Liege, as against 25000 lost by the Germans.

Montenegro has declared war on Austria.

Cornelius admitted to taking the money, saying he was more guilty than Edward J. Griffith, who was arrested with him, and who was taken to Baltimore to answer a larceny charge against him there.

The boys got $2.45 from one telephone booth and $4.60 from another. At Buena Vista station between $3 and $4 was secured.

ANOTHER JUMP IN PRICE OF SUGAR

Gettysburg Grocers Add Another Half Cent to Cost of Necessary Article. Local Stores Jump Swiss Cheese Five Cents a Pound.

Prices jumped again in Gettysburg Friday and to-day with the result that people of town are paying six cents a pound for sugar instead of five which was the price asked on Wednesday. Thursday it jumped one-half cent and Friday it made a similar rise. And the end is not yet in sight.

The effect of the war was first felt in this town in the sugar increase but other foodstuffs will go up in a very short time. The wholesale price of Swiss cheese has advanced twelve and thirteen cents a pound on account of the apparent impossibility of importing any for some time to come. In local stores the retail price has gone up from thirty five to forty cents. Cream cheese has advanced a cent and a half a pound wholesale.

Soup beans have increased seventy cents a bushel to the wholesale trade. It is not generally known that a large percentage of the beans used in this country are imported. This condition together with the failure of the crop in America will make them somewhat of a luxury. Lima beans have advanced a cent a pound. Many of these come from Madagascar.

Other articles affected by the impossibility of importing to any great extent will soon mount in prices and, while at the present time; the ordinary citizen feels little effect of the war, other than paying twenty percent more for his sugar, it will be but a short time before the far-famed high cost of living will be seen to be mounting still higher.

GOOD HAUL

Pickpockets Fleece Man of $30 at Pen Mar.

Pickpockets resumed their activities at Pen Mar Thursday afternoon during the big Odd Fellows reunion with disastrous results to a number of persons who were visitors to the park.

William Sheldon, of Waynesboro, lost thirty dollars at the terminal station while assisting a lady onto a trolley car. Mr. Sheldon had just placed the money in his hip pocket.

A number of excursionists complained of losing their money at the station. One woman lost a valuable gold watch, while two men found themselves shy ten and four dollars respectively when they reached into their pockets. No arrests were made nor was there any suspect located in the crowd.

Pickpockets operated at the same place in a bold and successful manner last year without being caught but up until Thursday there was no complaint of their activities this season.

Two Indian pipes in good condition were found by F. N. Willhide at Deerfield, near Thurmont. Messrs. Willhide and John Porter were digging around a large rock, when the pipes were unearthed. The rock from which they are cut is almost a lead color, is soft and capable of being highly polished.

MAY NOT SPEED IN BIGLERVILLE

Macadam Streets of Hustling Town Prove Attractive for Autoists and Cyclists. One of them is Arrested and Fined by the Burgess.

The use of Biglerville's macadamized streets for the speeding of automobiles and other vehicles is not to be tolerated according to the views of the city burgess, councilmen and officers of the law.

The first action to put a stop to the practice was taken Friday afternoon when Constable Morrell placed under arrest one George White, of Lancaster, and took him before Burgess Seasey, where he pleaded guilty and paid a fine and costs amounting to $5.25. The information was laid by L. L. Ulrich, a member of the highway committee of the town council.

White, it seems, had been spending the past week in and about Biglerville repairing furniture and traveling through the country on a motorcycle. The finely built streets of Biglerville proved a strong temptation to the young man and on York street, east and west, he would let out the machine at its best, the councilmen claiming that it would attain a speed of forty miles an hour. The new state road through the town also proved attractive and the offense finally became so frequent that the arrest was deemed necessary.

When taken before Mayor Seasey, White admitted that he had offended and paid the costs without complaint. It is said that he has finished his work at furniture repairing and that he has returned to Lancaster.

Biglerville's streets are now the best of any borough in the county. From eastern limit to western limit the town has built a fine macadam roadway which connects on the west with the state highway to Arendtsville, forming about four miles of continuous fine road. The State Highway Department is now completing a macadam road from the northern to the southern limits of the town on the main highway from Gettysburg to Bendersville, placing all the main streets in first class and permanent shape.

That speeding autoists and cyclists shall not take advantage of this condition and endanger the lives of the residents of the hustling town, the council has placed the "Danger, Run Slow" signs that limit speed to 15 miles an hour and further offenders will be dealt with in the same way as the Lancaster furniture man.

GETTYSBURG BOY KILLED IN WEST

With his Throat and Body Slashed by Unidentified Negroes, Paul Allison Dies on the Way to Hospital in Omaha, Nebraska.

Attacked by several unidentified negroes in the misty light of an early dawn, Paul W. Allison, son of Herbert P. Allison, of Gettysburg, was murdered last Sunday morning in Omaha, Nebraska. The news of his death was received here earlier in the week but no details of its cause were known until the body arrived Friday afternoon in charge of a representative of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Mr. Allison was a night switchman in the Omaha yards of the Burlington Route and with another employee, Henderson by name, was returning home on the tracks after a night of work. Suddenly several negroes jumped from behind a box car and started slashing at the men. Henderson received a cut across the face and ran, while Allison bore the brunt of the attack, putting up a defense and not leaving until he saw that it would mean death to do so.

Bleeding from a deep wound in the throat, and from two gashes extending almost from the middle of the back to his heart Allison staggered along for a block before he fell. He was placed in an ambulance but died on the way to the hospital. Henderson was also taken to the hospital and is still there under treatment, part of his nose having been cut off.

The motive for the crime is unknown. Mr. Allison was regarded as one of the most popular employees of the yards and it is not believed that revenge could have been the reason. It was not likely that he would have had any large amount of money on him at that time of day and the only plausible theory seems to be that the murderers were waiting for others who quit work about the same time and mistook their men. Several arrests have been made but the guilty parties are evidently still at large.

The funeral was held this afternoon at half past one from the home of his sister, Mrs. Eugene Schriver, on East Middle street, Rev. F. E. Taylor, of this place, and Rev. L. S. Black, of Easton, conducting the services. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

THROWN INTO SEWER

Sues Waynesboro for Death of his Young Daughter.

Jere Rowe of Waynesboro has brought suit against the borough of Waynesboro for damages for the death of his daughter, Anna, January 8, last. At noon, January 7, Anna Rowe, a girl who then lacked a day of being fifteen years old, returned home from the Roulette knitting mills, where she was employed, and coasted down hill in front of her home. Her sled ran into a stone-covered sewer inlet at the corner and she was thrown headfirst into the inlet. She was so severely injured that she died at 5 o'clock the next morning.

Recently Mr. Rowe, through his attorney, offered to settle with the borough for the girl's death for the sum of $500. Borough council considered the matter at its last meeting but took no action.

Last year on his birthday anniversary Dr. Fager walked to Dauphin, returned to Harrisburg, crossed the river and went over a circuitous route which took him to New Cumberland and returned to Harrisburg, covering a distance of fifty-nine miles.

ROAD DECISION

Opinion by Deputy Attorney General of Interest to Township Boards.

The township road bureau law of 1913 takes precedence of all local or special laws relative to control of township roads and repeals the famous township road law of 1845, according to an opinion just given to Joseph W. Hunter, Deputy Highway Commissioner, by Morris Wolf, Deputy Attorney General. Mr. Hunter is chief of the township road bureau and many questions have arisen as to the effect of the act of last year.

Mr. Wolf says the act of 1913 takes precedence, citing numerous instances where its provisions supersede the earlier statute, saying it is "manifestly inconsistent with the act of 1913".

THE FRENCH BEGIN ADVANCE ON GERMANY

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE.

NO BIG SEA BATTLE

Italy Declares War on Her Former Allies.

BELGIAN CITY IN FLAMES

Germany is Said to Have Lost 25,000 Men at Liege.

London, Aug. 8.—The French invasion of Germany began yesterday and France also hurled more troops into Belgium.

Fierce fighting at Liege, Belgium, resulted in the temporary retirement of the Germans after losses set at 25,000 men. Fighting has been resumed and the Germans forced their way into the city, which is reported to be in flames.

Italy has declared war on Germany, according to a report in London, which said that the Italian ambassador had conveyed the news to the English foreign office. The report lacked confirmation from official sources.

These are the salient features of the vital struggle that is on in Europe.

Reports that there was a big naval battle in the North Sea were set at rest in London by Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, who declared that beyond the sinking of the small British cruiser Amphion by a mine there had been no fighting or losses. With the Amphion were lost one officer, 130 British sailors and twenty German prisoners.

The Amphion was sunk by a mine planted by the Koenigsmarck, a Hamburg-American line steamer converted into a mine layer and sunk on Wednesday while doing this work under the protection of a Germany flying squadron.

Big Sea Battle Denied.

Some reports of the supposed battle in the North Sea said that fifteen German warships had been sunk and others that several French and British warships had been lost. One thing that tended to support the belief that the fleets had come into contact and that the Germans had retired to the Dutch or German coast was the announcement that the east coast of Great Britain was safe for coastwise shipping.

Many other unconfirmed reports were received of naval engagements. The German cruisers Goeben and Breslau, denied further shelter because of Italy's neutrality, steamed out of San Salvatore, Sicily, to give battle to the waiting British fleet. A report came from Naples that the battle had been fought and that both German cruisers were sunk.

A Finnish sea captain at Stockholm reported the Russian navy bottled up at Helsingfors and the Russian ports of Libau and Revel to be burning.

Tokio reported the German squadron at Tsing-Tau, China, hemmed in by British war vessels.

That the Belgians are holding out at Liege and have seriously disarranged the German plans for the invasion of France is the dominant note of the news from Brussels.

The Belgian capital declares the fortress remains intact, but Paris reports that the Germans forced their way into the city after fierce street fighting, but have been unable to take the city, while Rotterdam says that the German shells have set fire to the city. Another report to London is that the Germans have asked for a twenty-four hour armistice.

French Invade Germany.

Meantime the French advance into Germany was begun. The ministry of war in Paris officially announced that French troops had occupied Vic and Moyenvic, small German towns in Alsace-Lorraine, about twenty miles from Nancy.

Though this is merely a preliminary movement to cover the main advance of the French army, the ministry states that 400,000 infantry and cavalry, supported by artillery, are ready to cross the German border at General Joffre's command.

Two future rulers, if they survive the conflict, are now in the field. The Prince of Wales has been commissioned in the Grenadier Guards and is to see active service, though it may be confined to England.

The German crown prince is in command of the German army operating against France. Though reported to have reached Belgium, the London Standard has a report that the Kaiser's heir has been gravely wounded by an unidentified assailant, who escaped. In the effort to trace the assailant, says this paper, the Germans in

THE KAISER DEFIES "WORLD OF ENEMIES"

Declares Germany Will Fight to the Last.

Berlin, Aug. 8.—A proclamation by Emperor William, addressed to the German nation, was published in the Official Gazette. The text follows:

"Since the foundation of the German empire it has been for forty-three years the object of the efforts of myself and my ancestors to preserve the peace of the world and to advance by peaceful means our vigorous development.

"Our adversaries, however, are jealous of the success of our work and there has been latent hostility to the east and to the west and beyond the seas. This has been borne by us till now, as we were aware of our responsibility and our power.

"Now, however, these adversaries wish to humiliate us, asking that we should look on with folded arms and watch our enemies preparing themselves for the coming attack.

"They will not suffer that we maintain our resolute fidelity to our ally who is fighting for her position as a great power and with whose humiliation our power and honor would equally be lost.

"So the sword must decide. In the midst of perfect peace the enemy surprises us. Therefore to arms!

"Any dallying and temporizing would be to betray the Fatherland. To be or not to be, is the question for the empire which our fathers founded. To be or not to be, is the question for German power and German existence.

"We shall resist to the last breath of man and horse and we shall fight out the struggle even against a world of enemies.

"Never has Germany been subdued when she was united.

"Forward with God who will be with us as he was with our ancestors."

LIEGE FORTS STILL HOLD OUT

Germans Enter the City, But Lose 25,000 Men.

THEN ASK AN ARMISTICE

King Albert Refuses to Suspend Hostilities—Details of Battle Are Now Coming In.

Paris, Aug. 8.—Official reports received here say the German troops have entered the Belgian city of Liege, but have not been able to take the forts.

Fighting of the most violent character took place in the streets. The Belgian troops have captured twenty seven German cannon.

An Exchange Telegraph company's dispatch from Brussels says the German troops at Liege acknowledged the loss of 25,000 men. The agency says this statement is official.

Another dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Brussels says the French army has now entered Belgium and has advanced well into the country.

The Germans before Liege have requested a twenty-four hours' armistice, according to an announcement made by the Belgian ministry of war. King Albert refused to grant the armistice. At the ministry it was stated that the Germans admitted their casualties numbered 25,000.

It is assumed that the Germans asked for an armistice in order to pick up their dead and wounded.

One hundred and twenty thousand German troops were hurled upon the city of Liege in a third desperate attempt to capture that city. Reinforced by fresh troops that arrived shortly after the Kaiser's forces retired Thursday night and camped on the left bank of the Meuse, General Von Emmich's remnants moved forward.

Before the infantry got into action eighty-seven batteries stationed along the Meuse shelled Fort Fleron and put three of its mortars out of commission.

Under cover of the artillery the German infantry then dashed forward and within a short time had taken Bressoux, a suburb of Liege, only a short distance from Fort Fleron. Desperate hand-to-hand fighting was going on in the streets.

The forts about Bressoux were unable to fire upon the combatants for fear of killing Belgians as well as Germans. If the Germans retain Bressoux they probably will be able to take the main city in a few hours.

Ten thousand men were rushed from Fort Evigne and Fort Barchon to assist the troops resisting the Germans at Bressoux, where many houses are in flames. The garrison at Fort Fleron was hard pressed to defend itself, a large force of the Germans concentrating their attack on that strategic point.

All reports of the fighting at Liege agree that the German infantry advanced in masses, holding to absolute close order. This resulted in heavy casualties.

Le Peuple in Brussels says the bombardment of Liege had caused six or seven fires in the city. The heaviest firing occurred Thursday afternoon. German officers then came to the city with a white flag and demanded the surrender of the place. They received a negative reply and the bombardment was resumed.

Martial law has been proclaimed throughout Belgium.

The Daily News at Brussels sends the following dispatch:

All the forts surrounding Liege are intact. A Belgian airplane, thus describes the German attack on Liege: "After a terrible cannonade the German infantry approached en masse and reached the glacis of the forts where the heavy defensive guns were unable to reach them. General Lemans sent artillery to a point where the invading infantry could be shelled, and the Germans were swept from their position. This occurred several times during the day and night.

"A patrol of Uhlans performed a remarkable exploit by riding into the town. Belgian officers recognized the Uhlans and a desperate fight ensued. Several on each side were killed.

"Red Cross automobiles arriving at Brussels report that the ground before the forts is covered with dead and wounded Germans."

Report Netherlands at War.

DON'T FAVOR MEDIATION

Warring Powers Reply to President Wilson's Offer.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Replies of some of the foreign governments, to whom United States mediation was offered, were received by Secretary of State Bryan.

While he would make no definite statement concerning these answers, he characterized them as "notices of receipt" of the offers. He held a long conference with President Wilson, presumably on this subject.

It was understood that there was nothing favorable in the replies. The state department has been unable to get its mediation message to the czar of Russia, because he is traveling about, it was officially learned.

Secretary Barclay, of the British embassy, brought a communication to the state department, but officials and Barclay refused to state if it was Great Britain's reply to the mediation offer.

300,000 THROWN OUT OF WORK

War Responsible For Huge Army of Unemployed in U. S.

New York, Aug. 8.—Fifty thousand men are idle in this city as the direct result of the war in Europe, and labor union officials declared that at least 250,000 more have been thrown out of work elsewhere in the United States from the same cause.

Overseas commerce is at a standstill. Twelve thousand sailors, firemen, cooks and stewards from freight and passenger vessels are waiting in New York without employment.

Fifteen thousand longshoremen have no wages because no freight is being handled on the docks. An equal number of teamsters is affected. Similar misfortune has come upon other thousands in all the small industries connected with shipping.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Eng., Aug. 8.—A German spy was challenged on the Tyne bridge and refused to stop at the order of the sentry on guard. Running from the bridge, he endeavored to escape in a boat and was shot and killed.

WAR SITUATION ENGLAND IN

People Urged to Conserve Food Supply by Using Scrap Dishes.

WITH mutual declarations of war by Germany and England eight nations, four navies and 17,000,000 men were plunged into what promises to be the greatest armed conflict in history. Events are crowding fast one upon the other as the European trouble, which had its inception in the clash between Austria and Serbia, has resolved itself into a gigantic struggle between the dual alliance, Austria-Hungary and Germany, on the one hand, and the triple entente and its allies, Russia, France, England, Belgium, Serbia and Montenegro, on the other.

Huge War Chests.

Measures have been instituted in England, France and Germany for the financial support of their war operations. The British parliament voted a war appropriation of $525,000,000. In Germany a bill was introduced to appropriate $1,250,000,000. The French parliament authorized the Bank of Need You." The advertisement said that the empire was on the brink of the greatest war in the history of the world, and appealed to all unmarried men between the ages of eighteen and thirty years to join the army immediately.

Another Gold Ship Sails.

Impressed with the seriousness of the situation of Americans in Europe, the administration in Washington has entered upon the consideration of large scale measures for their relief. This assistance includes not only money, but ships to aid these Americans. The money has been dispatched in the form of gold coin, and the fast scout cruiser Tennessee was chosen to carry the precious cargo, amounting to $5,000,000.

This money is sent to be utilized in supplying gold currency to the clients of a number of large concerns.

The president asked congress to place at his disposal at once the sum of $2,500,000, to be used in the aid of Americans in Europe. The special message making this request followed

German advance toward Brussels on these two trunk lines would be impossible.

Liege and Namur are not directly connected by rail. Indeed, nearly all the lines in these parts run east and west across the frontiers. Connection between the fortresses would, however, be easy to the Belgians, using inner lines of railroad.

Thirty miles up the Meuse is Namur. The town, which has 34,000 inhabitants, lies on the north side of the Meuse in an obtuse angle formed by the junction of the Meuse and the Sambre. Namur has been besieged many times. The present defenses are made up of a chain of nine detached forts three or four miles outside of the town.

Namur is one of the principal stations on the direct railway line from Brussels to Luxembourg. There is also a line north to Tirlemont, another up the Meuse, which here flows from the south, and another west to Charleroi, Mons and eventually to Paris.

The Wilson Proclamation.

The proclamation signed by President Wilson declares neutrality with respect to Austria, Serbia, Germany, Russia, France and England, where, it states, "a state of war unhappily exists," and announces that these acts are forbidden:

"First.—Accepting and exercising a commission to serve either of the said belligerents by land or by sea against the other belligerents.

"Second.—Enlisting or entering into the service of either of the said belligerents as a soldier or as a marine or seaman on board of any vessel of war, letter of marque or privateer.

"Third.—Hiring or retaining another

DINNER MENU.

Baked Chopped Beef With Tomato Sauce.
Browned New Potatoes.
Lettuce or Cucumbers.
Peach Pie.
Coffee.

IN peach time the housewife is fortunate, for there are so many dainty desserts which may be made with this wholesome fruit.

Peach Pie.—Cover a pie plate with good, tender pie crust and cut enough fresh peaches in halves to cover it. Pour in a little of the juice, and then fill up with sour cream and sprinkle sugar over it generously. Lay strips of the pie crust across it as in cranberry pie or tarts, and bake slowly.

With Cream Sauce.

Peach Pudding.—Mix two tablespoonfuls of flour thoroughly with one cupful of sugar. Pare good, ripe peaches, cut into halves, leaving in a few stones. Put a layer in a deep pudding dish and cover with half of the prepared sugar. Add a second layer of peaches. Cover with rest of the sugar. Dot with bits of butter. Pour in one cupful of water. Cover with a rich biscuit dough. Make incisions in three or four places, so the juice will not run out if the dish is deep enough. Bake in quick oven. No sauce is needed, but cream may be used.

Nice For Children.

Rice With Peaches.—Wash one cupful of rice, put it in a double boiler with one quart of scalded milk, cook half an hour, add one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-half cupful of sugar and cook until tender and the liquid absorbed. Turn into a mold wet with cold water, press down firmly and set away in a cold place until needed. Make a sirup of one pint of sugar, one pint of water and the juice of two lemons and boil until clear. Peel and cut in halves one dozen fine peaches. Turn the rice out on a serving dish, arrange the fruit around it and pour the sauce over the whole. Serve cold.

Delicious Iced Dessert.

Peach Mousse.—Take one cupful of cream, one cupful of mashed peaches, one-half cupful of sugar and one teaspoonful of almond extract. Whip the cream and squeeze the peaches through a wire potato masher or food chopper. Mix all together well; then put in a small pail or pound coffee can or even a quart glass jar will do. Cover and stand inside a large kettle so there will be about three inches all around between inner and outer receptacle. Then pack all around with the usual mixture of ice and salt. Cover with an old rug and let stand about two hours.

AUSTRIANS TO TAKE POISON.

Officers Will Use Vials of Deadly Fluid if Captured by Servians.

Count Alexander Salm-Hoogstraeten, lieutenant in the Thirteenth dragoons, an Austrian cavalry regiment, on the eve of leaving New York for Austria to join his regiment, said that the officers of the Austrian army are to be supplied with small vials of poison, which, if they are captured by the Servians, will be used to destroy them selves rather than undergo the indignities which they will suffer at the hands of their enemies.

Austria has 3,500,000 men ready for field duty before issuing a second call to arms. If other foreign powers are involved in the war the Austrians in America will charter steamships and leave to fight for their country.

Feather In Babe's Neck.

For days the baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton of Norwich, N. Y., refused to eat and acted strangely. Physicians were unable to discover the trouble. Mrs. Hamilton finally noticed a bunch on the baby's neck. She lanced it and pulled out a feather. It evidently had been swallowed by the child and caught in the throat, finally working itself out through the tissues.

Gladstone's Domestic Rule.

Mr. Gladstone once said that he had solved the domestic problem in this way: "Whenever Mrs. Gladstone insists I submit; and whenever I insist she submits." He didn't say, however, whether they took turns about insisting and submitting. Marriage is a failure when one of the parties insists on being the insister and doesn't take turns in submitting to the submitter.

This map shows the whole of the German empire and border districts of the adjoining countries, where military operations have already taken place. Markers point out where the German troops have invaded France by way of Luxembourg and Belgium; where they have entered Russian territory, attacking several of the border towns, and where the German warships opened hostilities in the Baltic, shelling and partly destroying the coast town of Libau.

France to increase its note issue from about $1,340,000,000 to $2,400,000,000 and to abstain from paying out gold in exchange for notes. Only in the case of France was there any definite indication of how the money is to be raised, aside from drawing on government funds already in hand.

The New York Times quotes an expert as saying that the nations involved can find the necessary money even if the war lasts years.

England Economizes.

But in spite of the huge war chests of the fighting nations there are grim realizations of the hardships and deprivations that are certain to follow. London is calmly preparing to face a possible famine by economy in money, food and fuel. The Carlton club committee struck the keynote with the decision to serve only simple meals, but to retain all its servants and to advance food prices slightly.

Among the rules published to this end and to make economy a "family game" are to save the vegetable scraps from the saucepan, to use nutritious potato skins and to make brown flour from wheat chaff.

Britons are asked to live on a standard dish of a little meat stewed with many vegetables. Children and those over forty years must use a one course meal. Cheese and nuts are to take the place of butter. Pickled peas and scrap dishes are recommended.

Fear Loss of Imports.

All the papers declare there is no panic, so far as the persons who rush to fill their larders. Trade routes are open, and the country is well supplied. England may be cut off from the East and imports of bacon, sugar, poultry and dairy produce may be stopped. Self-restraint and business-like conduct are recommended as checks to panic tendencies. There need be no alarm that with no specie money circulating there will be rings at corners in the food supply.

There are prospects of a paper famine in London. Most journals are already beginning to cut down the size of their issues. Particularly is this the case with evening papers.

A London war office advertisement was headed: "Your King and Country only by twenty-four hours one asking for a special appropriation of one-tenth this sum for the same purpose.

Japan Ready.

With the world agitated at the chain of rapid developments, grim news comes from other countries which are likely to be drawn into the conflict. The strongest of these is Japan.

Japan announced herself ready to live up to her alliance with Great Britain in case of certain eventualities. Spain was reported to be preparing a proclamation of neutrality. Italy has declared her neutrality, but is mobilizing. Belgium, Holland and Switzerland have mobilized. The German demand that the Belgian government should permit the free passage of German troops through Belgium was answered by hasty preparations to resist such an advance across Belgian territory.

Sweden made no answer to inquiries from Russia and Germany as regards her attitude, but is preparing to defend her neutrality.

The Big Battleground.

All signs now point to Belgium as the big European battleground. Hostilities were begun in that strategic territory by the Germans' bombardment of Liege and Namur. Belgium is a strategic point because it is a checkrein on Germany's greater power in the North sea, which would increase her commercial standing to the detriment of England.

Liege and Namur, the Belgian fortresses, lie about thirty odd miles apart on the river Meuse. Liege has been called the most strongly fortified city in Europe.

Both are railroad centers of great importance, but Liege is in itself a more considerable city. It lies on both banks of the Meuse, which is here divided by a long and narrow island. Six bridges cross the river. The modern defenses consist of a chain of twelve detached forts at distances ranging from four to six miles from the city itself.

Liege has 174,000 people and is the seat of a university and large factories. There is also a railroad line south which connects at Jemelle with the line from Luxembourg, so that as long as Liege is in Belgian hands it slippers he produced for her approval. Finally she said: "I think, perhaps, I shall take these two pairs. But Louis XV heels are too high for me. Give me a size lower—or, stay—perhaps Louis XIII will be high enough."

The Adventures of Kathlyn

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Illustrated by Pictures from the Moving Picture Production of the Gelig Polyscope Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Kathlyn Hare, believing her father, Col. Hare, in peril, has summoned her, leaves her home in California to go to him in Allahabad, India. Umballa, pretender to the throne, has imprisoned the colonel, named by the late king as his heir.

CHAPTER II—Arriving in Allahabad Kathlyn is informed by Umballa that her father being dead she is to be queen, and must marry him. She refuses and is informed by the priests that no woman can rule unmarried. She is given seven days to think it over.

CHAPTER III—She still refuses and is told that she must undergo two ordeals with wild beasts. If she survives she will be permitted to rule.

CHAPTER IV—John Bruce, an American, saves her life.

CHAPTER V—The elephant which carries her from the scene of her trials runs away, separating her from Bruce and the rest of the party.

Umballa raised both his hands in astonishment. He knew now why that form had stirred his recollection.

"You!" He laughed and clapped his hands to summon his servants. Kathlyn, realizing that it was useless to attempt to move this man, turned and started to run, but he intercepted her. "My queen, my bride that was to be, the golden hour! Five times five thousand rupees would not purchase a hair of your head."

"I am your queen!" But she said it without heart.

"What! Do you believe that? Having passed the ordeals, you nullified the effect by running away. You will be whatever I choose! O, it will be legally done. You shall go with me to the Council, and the four of us shall decide. Ah, you would not be my wife!"

"You shall die, Durga Ram," she replied, "and it will be the death of a pariah dog."

"Ah! Still that spirit which I loved. Why did I not buy you without knowing who you were? Are you not mine? At this very moment I could place you in my zenana and you would not know it. And you would not want any more to know."

"A queen without mercy?"

"Mercy? I know not the word. But I have an ambition which surpasses all other things. My wife you shall be, or worse. But legally, always legally!" He laughed again and swiftly caught her in his arms. She struggled like a tigress, but without avail. He covered her face and neck with kisses, then thrust her aside. "Poor little fool! If you had whined and whimpered I should have let you go long ago. But here burns within you a spirit I must conquer, and conquer I will!"

Kathlyn snatched a pistol from a pillar. Had she held a weapon in her hands she would have killed him without compunction, as one crushes a poisonous viper.

"Legally! Why, all the crimes in Hind are done under that word. It is the shibboleth of the British raj. Legally! Come!"

"I will not stir!"

"Then be carried," he replied, beckoning his servants.

"No, no!"

"Ah! Well, then, we'll ride together in the palanquin."

To struggle would reward her with nothing but shame and humiliation; so she bent her head to the inevitable.

"Behold!" cried Umballa later, as he entered the presence of the Council, "behold a slave of mine!" He pushed Kathlyn forward. "This day I bought her for five thousand rupees."

The Council stirred nervously.

"Do you not recognize her?" exultantly.

The Council whispered to one another.

"Legally she is mine, though she has been a queen. But by running away she has forfeited her rights to the law of the ordeals. Am I not right?"

The Council nodded gravely. They had not yet wholly recovered from their bewilderment.

stood that way for a long time.

At this very moment there appeared before the Council a wild-eyed, disheveled young man. How he had passed the palace guard none of them knew.

He laughed again and swiftly caught her in his arms. She struggled like a tigress, but without avail. He covered her face and neck with kisses, then thrust her aside. "Poor little fool! If you had whined and whimpered I should have let you go long ago. But here burns within you a spirit I must conquer, and conquer I will!"

Kathlyn snatched a pistol from a pillar. Had she held a weapon in her hands she would have killed him without compunction, as one crushes a poisonous viper.

"Legally! Why, all the crimes in Hind are done under that word. It is the shibboleth of the British raj. Legally! Come!"

"I will not stir!"

"Then be carried," he replied, beckoning his servants.

"No, no!"

"Ah! Well, then, we'll ride together in the palanquin."

To struggle would reward her with nothing but shame and humiliation; so she bent her head to the inevitable.

"Behold!" cried Umballa later, as he entered the presence of the Council, "behold a slave of mine!" He pushed Kathlyn forward. "This day I bought her for five thousand rupees."

The Council stirred nervously.

"Do you not recognize her?" exultantly.

The Council whispered to one another.

"Legally she is mine, though she has been a queen. But by running away she has forfeited her rights to the law of the ordeals. Am I not right?"

The Council nodded gravely. They had not yet wholly recovered from their bewilderment.

"On the other hand, her identity must remain a secret till I have developed my plans," continued Umballa.

"You are all courting a terrible reprisal," said Kathlyn. "I beg of you to kill me at once; do not prolong my torture, my misery. I have harmed none of you, but you have grievously harmed me. One even now seeks aid of the British raj; and there are many soldiers."

The threat was ill timed.

The head of the Council said to Umballa: "It would be wise to lock her up for the present. We all face a great complication."

"A very wise council," agreed Umballa, knowing that he had but to say the word to destroy them all. And she shall have company. I would not have her lonely. Come, majesty; deign to follow your humble servant." Umballa salaamed.

Kathlyn was led to a cell in the palace prison, whose walls she had but a little while ago viewed in passing, and thrust inside. A single window admitted a faint light. Umballa remained at the door, chuckling softly. Presently, her eyes becoming accustomed to the dark, Kathlyn discovered a man chained to a pillar. The man suddenly leaned forward.

"Kit, my Kit!"

Umballa crawled to the open door. He pulled himself up and stood there, weakly. But there was venom enough in his eyes. The tableau lasted a minute or two; then slowly he closed the door, bolted it, and departed.

This ominous silence awoke the old terror in Kathlyn's heart far more than verbal threats would have done. There would be reprisal, something finished in cruelty.

"My dear, my dear!" She ran over to her father and flung her arms about him, supporting him and mothering him. An hour passed.

"All in, Kit; all in; haven't the strength of a cat. Ah, great God! if that strength had but lasted a moment longer! Well, he's still alive. But, O, my Kit, my golden Kit, to see you here is to be tortured like the damned. And it is all my fault, all mine!" The man who had once been so strong sobbed hysterically.

"Hush, hush!"

"There were rare and wonderful jewels of which I alone knew the hiding place. But God knows that it was not greed; I wanted them for you and Winnie. I knew you were here. Trust that black devil to announce the fact to me. . . . God! what I haven't suffered in the way of suspense! Kit, Kit, what has he done to you?"

Briefly she recounted her adventures, and when she had done he bowed his head upon her bare shoulder and wept as only strong men, made weak, weep.

To Kathlyn it was terrible. "Father, don't, don't! You hurt me! I can't stand it!"

After a while he said: "What shall we do, Kit; what shall we do?"

"I will marry him, father," she answered quietly. "We can take our revenge afterward."

"What?"

"If it will save you."

"Child, let me not here. What! Would you trust him, knowing his false heart as you do? The moment you married him would be my death warrant. No, no! If you weaken now I shall curse you, curse you, my Kit! There has been horror enough. I can die."

"Well, and so can I, father."

Silence. A far cockatoo shrieked; a laugh came faintly through the window, and later the tinkle of music. Up above the world was going on the same as usual. Trains were hurrying to and fro; the great ships were going down the sapphire seas; children were at play, and the world-wide marts were busy with the daily affairs of men.

"Jealousy!" she murmured, gazing at the sky beyond the griled window. Was there ever a precious stone that lay not in the shadow of blood and misery? Poor, poor, foolish father! As if jewels were in beauty a tithe of the misery they begot!

"Ay, Kit, jewels; sapphires and rubies and emeralds, diamonds and pearls and moonstones. And I wanted them for my pretty cubs! Umballa knew that I would return for them and laid his plans. But were they not mine?"

"Yes, if you intended to rule these people; no, if you thought to take them away. Do you not know that to Winnie and me a hair of your head is more precious than the Koh-i-noor? We must put our heads together and plan some way to get out."

She dropped her arms from his shoulders and walked about the cell, searching every stone. Their only hope lay in the window, and that appeared impossible since she had no means of fling through her father's chains and the bars of the window. She returned and sat down beside her father and rested her aching head on her knees, thinking, thinking.

Bruce, struggling with the soldiers (and long since their fat flesh had been stung into such activity!), saw Umballa appear in the corridor.

"Durga Ram," he cried, with a furious effort to free his arms, "Durga Ram, you damnable scoundrel, it would be wise for you to kill me, here and now, for I I ever get free, God help you! O, I shan't kill you; that would be too merciful. But I'll break your bones, one by one, and never more shall you stand and walk. Do you hear me? Where is Kathlyn Hare? She's mine!"

Umballa showed his teeth in what was an attempt to smile. He still saw flashes of fire before his eyes, and it was yet difficult to breathe naturally. Still, he could twist this white man's heart, play with him.

"Take him away. Put him outside the city gates and let him go."

Bruce was greatly astonished at this sign of clemency.

"But," added Umballa, crossing his lips with his tongue, "place him against a wall and shoot him if he is caught within the city. He is mad, and therefore I am lenient. There is no white woman in the palace or in the royal zenana. Off with him!"

"You lie, Durga Ram! You found her in the slave mart today."

Umballa shrugged and waved his hand. He could have had Bruce shot at once, but it pleased him to dangle death before the eyes of his rival. He was no fool; he saw the trend of affairs. This young white man loved Kathlyn Hare. All the better, in view of what was to come.

Bruce was conducted to the good cheer; Umballa and I shall meet soon, man to man."

"Allah is Allah; there is no God but God."

"And sometimes," said Bruce, moodily, "he watches over the innocent."

"Ahmed is at Hare Sahib's camp."

"Thanks, Ali; that's the best news I have heard yet. Ahmed will find a way. Take care of yourself. I'm off!"

When Umballa appeared before the Council their astonishment knew no bounds. The clay tinted skin, the shaking hands, the disheveled garments—what had happened to this schemer whom ill luck had made their master?

He explained. "I went too near our prisoner. A flash of strength was enough. They shall be flogged."

"But the woman!"

"Woman? She is a tiger-cat, and tiger-cats must sometimes be flogged. It is my will. Now I have news for you. There is another sister, younger and weaker. Our queen," and he salaamed ironically, "our queen did not know that her father lived, and there I made my first mistake."

"But she will now submit to save him!"

"Ah! would indeed that were the case. But tiger-cats are always tiger-cats, and nothing will bend this maid; she must be broken, broken. It is my will," with a flash of fire in his eyes.

The Council salaamed. Umballa's will must of necessity be theirs, hate him darkly as they might.

And rudely pushed outside. He turned savagely, but a dozen black officers convinced him that this time he would meet death. Ah, where was Ali, and Ahmed, and the man Lal Singh, who was to notify the English? He found Ali at camp, the chief mahout having been conducted there in an improvised litter. He recounted his experiences.

"I was helpless, sahib."

"No more than I am, Ali. But be of (Continued on Monday)

WASHINGTON BANQUETS LED HIM TO EAT SAND.

Former Congressman Took a Lesson From the Turkeys and Chickens.

Is a representative in congress related in any way to a fowl? asks the Washington Star.

The differences are manifold and obvious, it adds, and yet—and yet—

Former Representative George W. Cromer of the Fifth Indiana district could not eat. Campaign lunches and tepid banquets had worked their will with him.

Some men under the circumstances take to golf. Others, like the historian Carlyle, walk. Mr. Cromer ate sand.

Morning, evening, noon and night the statesman would go to his private dining room, armed with a tablecloth and wearing a look of gritty determination.

Anxious friends came to him.

"This is all very well," they said. "But you are overdoing this. You are burying yourself alive, and, at that, you are not doing it right. An interment should be from the outside and not from the inside."

Mr. Cromer said nothing, but went right on absorbing his daily ration of sand.

All this was a year ago. Gradually the statesman began to perk up. True, his friends protested that his hair was somewhat more sandy and he was more gritty than he had been before, but these alterations did not mar him. His digestion returned. On the theory that after sand you can eat anything, he found ham and cabbage as harmlessly nutritious as boiled milk.

The flush of health returned to his cheek, and when he was cured he explained:

"The turkeys and chickens can eat sand without deleterious effects. If they can, why not I?"

STORY OF CAILLAUX CASE.

Shooting of Editor Calmette Due to His Campaign Against Ex-Premier.

The Caillaux case, the most celebrated French trial since the Dreyfus case and which resulted in the acquittal of Mme. Henriette Caillaux, wife of Joseph Caillaux, the ex-premier and ex-minister of finance, began on the evening of March 16, when Gaston Calmette, editor of the Paris Figaro, was shot in his office by Mme. Caillaux.

He died a few hours later. The shooting was the consequence of a newspaper campaign waged by Calmette against Caillaux.

Caillaux was premier in 1911, holding office during the Morocco crisis, and resigning in January, 1912, on account of popular dissatisfaction at the settlement made with Germany at that time.

Calmette's attacks charged, among other things, that Caillaux had used his influence to delay the trial of the swindler, Henri Rochette, in 1908, so as to give him time to escape to Mexico, and that as minister of finance he had promised to certain capitalists against the government $1,200,000 on condition that they subscribe 80 per cent of that sum to the Radical campaign fund. It is said that Calmette had various letters in his possession charging that Caillaux was a tool of Germany in the Morocco crisis which he had not yet published at the time of his death.

MRS. WILSON'S DEATH MOURNED

Entire Nation Extends Sympathy to President's Family.

FUNERAL TO BE PRIVATE

Interment Will Be Made at Rome, Ga., Where Her Parents Are Buried.

Washington, Aug. 8.—A pall of sadness hung over the White House and over all of Washington because of the death of the "first lady of the land."

At the main entrance to the executive mansion black crepe told of the sorrow within, and the gates of the White House grounds were closed. All the flags of the city were at half-mast and only a few clerks, those absolutely necessary for business, were at work in the executive offices.

Mrs. Wilson's body was kept in the room where she died, in the southwest corner of the White House, on the second floor, overlooking the Potomac river.

The president went into the room several times and sat alone. He was left undisturbed. Other members of the family went in from time to time, but even intimate friends were kept out. Every effort was made by his friends to divert the president's mind from his grief.

Tentative plans for the funeral were announced at the White House. A simple funeral service will be held in the east room of the White House at two o'clock on Monday afternoon. The body will then be put aboard train and taken to Rome, Ga., Mrs. Wilson's former home. Interment will be in the Myrtlehill cemetery, at Rome, where Mrs. Wilson's parents are buried.

It was officially announced that the funeral service in the White House will be private.

Rev. Sylvester Beach, of Princeton, an old friend of the Wilson family, who officiated at the marriages of Mrs. McAdoo and Mrs. Sayre, probably will conduct the funeral service.

Word came to the White House that Mrs. Wilson's only sister, Mrs. Edward Elliott, is ill in California and will be unable to come to Washington for the services.

Three telegraph operators were kept busy at the White House receiving telegrams expressing sympathy with the president in the loss of his wife. The messages came from men prominent in politics, business and official life and from many who had no personal acquaintance with either the president or Mrs. Wilson, but wished to express their sorrow over his bereavement.

The scene at the death bed was recalled by one of those present. As the last hour drew near the president sat on the bedside, clasping Mrs. Wilson's hand, while Mrs. McAdoo, Mrs. Sayre and Miss Wilson knelt on the floor, their eyes on their mother's face. Dr. Grayson and a nurse came and went silently and the president looked beseechingly to the doctor for a sign of encouragement. No words were spoken.

At five o'clock exactly the soft chimes of a clock could be heard from the executive offices. As Dr. Grayson leaned over his patient he realized that the end had come, and he murmured a word to the president. Mr. Wilson's head fell forward in silent grief, while the daughter sobbed.

Liner Wireless Encouraging Message, But Don't Give Her Location.

New York, Aug. 8.—The Cunard liner Lusitania, speeding to Europe, sent back word by wireless that "all was well." Her position is not given.

This is the first word received from the liner since she passed out of the harbor early on Wednesday morning, prepared to dodge German vessels.

The message was dated 2 p. m., ship's time, and bore only two words.

After her departure there were many rumors that she was pursued by German vessels.

GENERAL PUTNICK.

Servian War Minister, Directing Army in War.

ITALY NOW LINED UP WITH KAISER'S FOES

Austria's Appeal For Aid Is Refused.

Rome, Aug. 8.—Italy threw its support to the Triple Entente—England, Russia and France—and ordered the two German cruisers, Goeben and Breslau, in the Messina harbor, to leave immediately or to disarm. The vessels left.

If the cruisers had not heeded the demand within twenty-four hours, the Italian government, under its declaration of strict neutrality, would have been compelled to take action toward their disarming.

Grand Duke D'Avarna, Italian ambassador to Austria, arrived in Rome from Vienna with an autograph letter from the king of Austria calling upon Italy to come to the assistance of Austria and Germany, but the Italian government in answer reiterated its policy of strict neutrality, declaring that any attempts on the part of Germany and Austria to draw Italy into the war would be fruitless.

The Italian government issued the following statement: "Italy's policy of neutrality is not merely one of self-interest, but is strictly in accord with both the letter and spirit of her obligations under the provisions of the Triple Alliance. However unpopular such action would have been, Italy would have joined Austria and Germany if there was a justification for it. It would have undertaken war rather than go back on its pledged word. The rupture in Europe that has taken place was not in Italy's power to avert."

SERVIAN VICTORY REPORTED

Austrian Regiment Defeated in Battle Near Semendria.

Rome, Aug. 8.—An Austrian regiment was nearly annihilated in a battle with Servians near Semendria, and the Austrians are now in full retreat toward the Danube, according to a dispatch received from Nish.

Servians to Take Aggressive.

Salonica, Aug. 8.—The whole aspect of the war in the Balkans has been changed by England's declaration of war against Germany.

From plans for a defense against Austria the entire Servian general staff has turned to plans of aggression. A spirit of determination tempered with fears in the army, changed in an instant to a spirit of high elation and confidence.

No one now believes that an Austrian soldier will cross the Danube. The Servians talk of a triumphant march through Bosnia and Herzegovina to arouse the Slavs and reclaim them to the Servian nation.

THE DOVE OF PEACE.

The dove of peace is busy.
She is almost getting dizzy.
And she wears a bandage on her weary throat.
In these days so dark and trying
She is fussing round and flying
Till she scarcely has the strength to coo a note.

She must hike across the border
And endeavor to keep order.
Then she hurries to the Asiatic climate
Where the royal execution
Is an honored institution
And they're holding a rebellion all the time.

Then the ills that threaten Europe
She must undertake to cure up
And remove the mutual causes of dislike.
She is in a sorry humor.
That the dove of peace is going on a strike.

TWO GREAT MILITARY RIVALS.

Sketches of Von Moltke of Germany and Joffre of France.

General Helmuth von Moltke, who as chief of staff of the German army commands the Kaiser's forces, is sixty-six years old and has spent his life studying the business of war. Next to the great French chief of staff, General Joffre, he is probably the most picturesque of the many high army officers now engaged in an active European war. He distinguished himself in the Franco-Prussian war forty-four years ago.

From the first he has been a favorite with the Kaiser. His appointment as chief of staff was in fact a declaration on the Kaiser's part that the army was to be run along lines of the old school—that is, with a mailed fist. And yet it was said, though with what authority is not known, that when the Kaiser gave General von Moltke the highest place in the army he told him that in the event of war he would be replaced.

He was born May 23, 1818, at Gersdorf, Mecklenburg. He has been chief of the general staff of the army since Feb. 16, 1904. As chief of the general staff he succeeded Field Marshal Count von Schlieffen.

General Joffre, chief of the French general staff, the man in charge of the forces of France in their opposition to German invasion, entered the French army as a lad of eighteen in time to serve through the Franco-Prussian war. He is now sixty-two years old, just four years the junior of his German adversary, General von Moltke, and has held his present place about two years.

He joined the army in 1870 as a second lieutenant and for two months at that boyish age commanded a battery of artillery during the siege of Paris. That was General Joffre's first service which commanded attention. Later he led the force that occupied the town of Timbuctoo for France and became governor of the capital of Madagascar, completing the organization of the province before he gave up the post.

Those who have written about General Joffre have all remarked that his policy is one of attack. He is said to believe that a commander's first duty is always to attack.

Human Hair Tells Race.

By the use of microscopes in connection with human hair scientists are able to tell to what great racial division the owner belonged. If a cross section of the hair is elliptical the man was black; if round, the man was red or yellow. The white man's hair is oval.

The Australian native has the finest hair, the bushmen of Africa next, then the American Indian, the Chinese, the white races of Europe and the Japanese coarsest of all.

The strength of human hair is in proportion to its thickness.

Conundrums.

Why is an absconding bank cashier like an air gun? Because he goes off loaded and makes no report.

What is that which you cannot hold ten minutes, although it is light as a feather? Your breath.

When is the worst weather for rats and mice? When it rains cats and dogs.

Why is I the luckiest of the vowels? Because it is the center of bliss.

Why does an onion resemble a ringing bell? Because peel follows peel in an onion and peel follows peel in a ringing bell.

War Halts America's Cup Races.

With the declaration of war between England and Germany, the international yacht races, which were to have been held off Sandy Hook in September between Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, Shamrock IV, and the American defender, Resolute or Vanitie, are virtually declared off.

Laura Jean Libbey's Talks on Heart Topics

TAKING A CHANCE ON HAPPINESS IN WEDLOCK.

Happy, happier far than thou,
With the laurel on thy brow,
She that makes the humblest hearth
Lovely but to one on earth.

There are very few girls who are blessed with a model lover, a man who has no faults. From the time his visits indicate serious intentions, the family of his sweetheart begin to speculate as to what faults he may have. Love is blind, they concede, declaring among themselves that it is wisest and best to point out his shortcomings. Then she will not jump blindly into matrimony.

Her father insinuates that a man's a sponge who comes calling on a girl Sunday afternoons and remains until the dinner bell rings, accepting her invitation to dine. Company dinners are more expensive than the plain, wholesome meals the family sits down to. Mother thinks daughter has made a happy choice of a suitor, insisting that not one young man in a hundred would be so considerate of her daughter as to provide a carriage when he takes her to the theater, even if it's only a few blocks off. And he dresses with such perfect taste, and sends her flowers evenings he does not come.

"That's sheer extravagance!" cuts in Uncle Ned. "It may do for a millionaire not knowing the need of money. It isn't the proper caper for a man who earns thirty per cent. I'd think more of his counting his pennies if he thinks of marrying."

Aunt Ellen fears he's inclined to flirt. She has seen him walking with young ladies and each one seemed to pay marked attention to. One or two of the girls she mistrusted to be dreadful coquettes. Her brother was of the opinion that he wasn't a stranger to the wine cup. He had run across him at a bar in a cafe! A chorus of "What took you there?" he silenced by a lame excuse—he stopped to buy a package of cigarettes! The way he looked from one to the other said plainer than words that he hoped the cigarette part would be believed. By the time the family sum up the lover's faults they made it appear that the girl would take a hazardous chance on matrimony if she married him.

There are maidens who accept these insinuations as truths. Other girls demand stronger proofs of the shortcomings of the man in whom they placed faith and love. She valiantly defends the absent one. If he visits her Sunday afternoons she knows he is with no one else. The hours are all too short. Manlike, he does not stop to consider the extra preparations for one more at the table. Didn't he bring a cane for father, a sewing basket for mother, an expensive pipe for Uncle Ned, a book for Aunt Ellen and a charm for brother Tom's watch chain? The cash for these peace offerings would more than set their table for a week.

Can he turn his head the other way, pass by his women friends, if they go in the same direction without a few words of pleasant greeting? I couldn't care for a man who would show discourtesy to my sex. As for extravagance, a lover should be pardoned for indulging the whim of a girl he loves once in a while, even if it is a strain on his pocketbook. Both understand tacitly that it will be trolley cars for them after marriage. Some men have but one fault. If it does not lead to excess it can be broken up, if his love for the girl who condones it is of sufficient strength. What can be expected from the man who conceals his follies? She can decide if it is safe to take a chance in wedlock with the man who is open and aboveboard in all he says and does.

Few if any men have the wisdom of Solomon. Love is a corrector of follies. The good qualities of a lover should be found out, given credit. If only perfect men went to the altar nearly every girl would live and die a spinster.

Peculiar Furnishing of Bird's Nest.

A golfer who was playing over the St. Neots (Huntingdonshire, England) links the other day hit his ball into a hedge, and after searching for it some time without success, observed a bird's nest. From curiosity more than with any expectation of finding his ball there he looked into the nest and found not only his own ball, but three others as well.

The Kind Of Government He Liked

By JOHN G. LARNED

"In any event, the crown prince must not be exposed," said von Bernstein.

"Which means that I must lose myself to the world."

The reply was made by Count Esterhoff, on whose person had been found a pack of marked cards. A party of young noblemen and the prince had been playing baccarat. His royal highness had lost heavily, and Esterhoff had won. In order to force the latter to return his winnings the prince, who sat near the winner, slipped the marked pack into his pocket and then accused him of having won his money by cheating. To prove his accusation he demanded that Esterhoff be searched, and the cards were found.

No one was deceived, nor was it intended that any one should be deceived. The scheme was to effect the return of the money the prince had lost to Esterhoff without the heir apparent being obliged to demean himself by accepting it as a gift.

"There is a way out of it if you choose to avail yourself of it," said Bernstein.

"What way?"

"Give up what you have won to the prince and the matter will be hushed up."

"That would be to acknowledge myself guilty. I prefer to appear guilty to the world and preserve my own self respect."

"Nonsense, count. It is our duty to preserve the sovereign from reproach.
He belongs to the people. Let them lose confidence in him and what follows? Anarchy."

Esterhoff stood firm. He was excluded from the prince's set on the ground that he had used marked cards.
He gave his winnings to the poor, which was considered a proof that his conscience had in the end got the better of him. Under the name of Peter Esterhoff he went to America. His family estates had been lost by his father, and it was his ambition to make money and redeem them.

Twenty years rolled by. The crown prince had become king under the title of Oscar VIII. He had remained a gambler and a spendthrift, though the ill success to recoup his losses with Count Esterhoff had kept him from trying such a method again. During the two decades that had since passed he had become personally bankrupt.
All that saved him was that the wealthy nobility, fearing that if he collapsed he would carry the government and them down with him, kept him afloat.

A wealthy American came to the capital and took a residence. He was unmarried and lived entirely alone.
Nobody knew why he had come, why he remained or what he did with himself. Bankers knew that he had brought with him unlimited credit from America, and it seemed to them that the money he drew was expended for something, though they did not know what.

One day the king received notice
from a lawyer that one of his notes which was due must be paid at once.
Oscar forwarded the note through his chamberlain to a noble who had been appointed by the other nobles to take care of the king's debts. The amount was paid, but other similar notices came pouring in so fast that it was found impossible to take care of them.
His majesty was informed that there was danger of a public scandal. Many of these claims were for money advanced for illegitimate purposes. The king asked who was pressing them and was told that an American multimillionaire was supposed to be at the bottom of it all.

One morning the American received a "command" to appear at the palace.
He replied that he had no wish to visit the king; if the king wished to see him he would find him at home. The next day the royal carriage stopped at the American's house; the king alighted and was received in the drawing room.

"I have called," said Oscar, "to learn the meaning of your having bought up claims against me and pressing them
for payment."

"Perhaps your majesty may remember when you were crown prince slipping a pack of marked cards into my pocket."

"Your pocket?"

"I am Count Esterhoff."

The king blanched.

"I have kept those cards," continued Esterhoff, "and would like to sell them to your majesty."

"How much do you ask for them?"
Inquired Oscar after collecting his facilities.

"Two hundred thousand American dollars for each card."

"Great heavens, man! What do you mean?"

"I mean that in my youth I lived under a system wherein the chief men and women found it to their interest to support injustice. If your people still feel the same in this matter let them raise $10,400,000 and buy the cards. I hold your notes to that amount, and the notes will go with the cards."

After a great effort those whose fortunes depended on the stability of the government raised the amount. As fast as the money came in they would redeem one or more cards and corresponding notes till all were taken up.
Then Esterhoff instead of redeeming his family domains went back to America. He said he had no use for a government except of the people, by the people and for the people.

Medical Advertising Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It nakes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry,
wispy and scraggly, just an application of two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic;
you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.
